Table of Contents

Dedication | i
---|---
Acknowledgements | ii
Abstract | iii
Table of Contents | v

Introduction | 1

Chapter One: A Theoretical Background to the figure of the Artist in Literature and Theatre

1.1 Art for Art’s Sake | 20
1.2 Art for Society’s Sake | 25
1.3 Theatre and the Role of the Artist | 30
1.4 The Artist in the Economy | 33
1.5 The Development of Contemporary British Theatre | 37

Chapter Two: Tom Stoppard: The Amorality of the Artist

2.1 British Theatre in the 1970s | 48
2.2 Pastiche and Parody | 51
2.3 Art and Politics | 57
2.4 Traditional versus Avant-garde Art: Artist Descending a Staircase (1972) | 60
2.5 Neutrality and the Function of the Artist: Travesties (1974) | 68

Chapter Three: Howard Barker: The Freedom and Constraint of the Artist’s Imagination

3.1 British Theatre in the 1980s | 81
3.2 Barker’s Theatre Theory | 86
3.4 Public versus Private Vision: Scenes from an Execution (1984) | 112
Chapter Four: Lost Voices: Gender and the Artist in Timberlake Wertenbaker’s Plays 128

4.1 Introduction 129

4.2 Wertenbaker’s Philosophy of Theatre 135

4.4 Maternal Longing and the Figure of Female Artist: The Break of Day (1995) 150

4.5 Individualism versus Capitalism: Three Birds Alighting on a Field (1991) 159

4.6 Male and Females’ Battle of Wills on Art: The Line (2009) 171

Conclusion 185

Bibliography 193

Appendix: Interview with Howard Barker 208